

Soil Association Scotland

What's for Lunch?

Putting food at the heart of the curriculum

A one-day conference for professionals working in public health, education, procurement, policy making, and catering

14 June 2007, Celtic Park, Glasgow

Soil Association Scotland's Food For Life campaign is widely recognised as leading the way on the provision of fresh, local and organic food for Scotland's schools.

This conference will underline the importance of putting food from sustainable sources on the school dinner plate to deliver benefits of public health, social justice, sustainable development and thriving local economies. And it will show how high levels of take-up of Food For Life Scotland meals result not only from the transformation on the dinner plate, but also from a range of educational experiences that help pupils and staff understand food production, and make connections with the people who produce their food.

Delegates will choose from four lunches provided by Food For Life catering teams from all over Scotland, and will be able to talk to cooks, teachers and children who are involved in these pilots.

Supported by

Organix

Soil Association Scotland

Registered charity number 206862

Celtic Park, Glasgow,
14 June, 2007

Cost: £130; or £95 for members

Booking deadline: 30 May 2007

10% off for early bird bookings, deadline:
18 April 2007

For further information contact our events team on 0131 666 2474, or events@soilassociationscotland.org; or visit www.soilassociationscotland.org

A year's membership of the Soil Association costs £24 – to qualify for the members' rate (saving £35 on the full conference fee), join online at www.soilassociationscotland.org, or call our membership team on 0117 914 2447 before you make your booking.